NAVSTA Bids Farewell to CMC

Taking just a few moments to recap Master Chief Mustain's long career and her many accomplishments, Capt. Robert Buehn revealed Master Chief's habit of referring to "her Sailors" as starfish and if one needed help she was on her way to save a starfish. That became the driving force behind the framed starfish Command Coin.

Most in attendance checked their watches so they could say "I told you so" as Master Chief Mustain departed through the sideboys at the end of the ceremony. The Master Chief had been telling everyone the ceremony would be a short one, with one minute allotted to each year of service. Of course, everyone knew that even if her address might fit into that timeframe, everyone else would find it difficult to trim their comments about her career and her impact on Guantanamo Bay over the past two years (not to mention her love of collectable t-shirts). Farewell Master Chief from a grateful GTMO.

Interactive TRICARE Handbook Online

The new online TRICARE handbook has interactive features that make it even more user-friendly and offers dynamically updated information.

The online version is available at www.tricare.osd.mil and offers a search function that allows either a subject or general search. It also allows users to jump to specific sections of the handbook by using the interactive table of contents.

"The ability to provide real-time updates and the search functions may be two of the best features of the Online TRICARE Handbook," said Cmdr. Ginny Raderstorf, director of Military Treatment Facility and Beneficiary Support Services for the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery in Washington, D.C.

"As TRICARE benefits or processes change, the ability to provide updates to the handbook's content ensure our beneficiaries have the most current information. Additionally, the dual search functions make it much easier to find what you're looking for."

The TRICARE handbook may also be downloaded in a printer-friendly format by section, or in its entirety.

Clinic Observes Children's Dental Health Month

The Dental Clinic at Naval Station Hospital is observing Children's Dental Health Month during the month of February. Parents are encouraged to make an appointment to bring their children, ages 4 - 6, in the clinic for an exam and cleaning on Feb. 22. Call the clinic at 7-2239 by Feb. 21 to make an appointment.

The annual observance of children's dental health began as a one-day event in Cleveland, Ohio on February 3, 1941. During that year, February 3-7 was designated as Children's Dental Health Week in Akron, Ohio.

The American Dental Association held the first national observance of Children's Dental Health Day on February 8, 1949. This single day observance became a week-long event in 1955. In 1981, the program was extended to a month-long celebration known today as National Children's Dental Health Month.

Since 1941, the observance has grown from a two-city event into a nationwide program. NCDHM messages reach millions of people in communities across the country and at numerous armed service bases abroad.

Harlem Ambassadors Razzle-Dazzle GTMO

The internationally acclaimed Harlem Ambassadors 2002-2003 "Around the World" Tour covering Europe, Asia, and North America turned up in GTMO this week for several basketball demonstration, including performances at both schools, the base gym and Camp America. And, as their slogan states, "It's better than your Grandfather's Basketball Show."

In a press release from the Harlem Ambassadors after appearing at Fort McCoy, Wis., Ambassadors president Dale Moss said, "It's amazing, but with three overseas tours each of the past three seasons, the Ambassadors actually cover more of the globe than that other 'Harlem' team that has 'globe' in its name."

The Ambassadors Tour has carried the team to 39 states and 19 foreign countries. "We are extremely honored that the military has chosen our show to go to GTMO and entertain our sailors and Marines stationed there," said Moss.

The Harlem Ambassadors Basketball Show featured high-flying slam dunks, dazzling ball handling, and comedy routines led by Ladè Majic, Queen of Show Basketball. The only woman coach/player of an all men's professional team, Ladè Majic has played more show basketball games than any woman in history. She competes against opposing men players on a nightly basis and represents a great positive role model for young girls.

The Harlem Ambassadors treated the students at W.T. Sampson Elementary School to some humorous on court antics.

The Ambassadors do not travel with a pre-selected opponent or present a choreographed show.

"We like to be challenged by the best local players," said Ladè Majic, "there are always a few tough players in any place we go."

Dealing with opposition who do not know exactly what will happen next always creates an Ambassadors show that is loaded with spontaneous, improvisational humor.

Testing their talents against the pros, these brave students try to out-manuever the Ambassadors.

During a break in entertainment, the Ambassadors asked some of the students to give them the definition of success and tell them what they wanted to be when they grew up.

GTMO Honors Martin Luther King, Jr.

Pauline Thompson performs a moving dance interpretation of "Amazing Grace."

Monday, January 20 marked the 74th birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and the 17th anniversary of this national holiday. The theme for the 2003 celebration was "Remember! Celebrate! Act! A day on, not a day off!" Members of the GTMO community did just that. Gathering at the POW/Memorial, residents marched to the base chapel and then attended a moving tribute to the great civil rights leader.

Below: Students from W.T. Sampson High School take to the stage and recite Dr. King's famous "I Have a Dream" speech.

RP3 LaRosa Johnson and IT2 Stevenson join voices to sing "We Shall Over Come."

After the march, CWO2 Joseph King welcomes everyone to the chapel ceremony.

Wiz of the West Wows GTMO Crowd

After less than a week of rehearsal, the younger members of the GTMO community took to the stage and wowed audiences with a production of "The Wiz of the West", a western version of The Wizard of Oz.

Everyone, from the main character Dotty to the smallest tarantula, gave a performance that was not to be missed and will be talked about for months to come.

The story followed Tinhorn, Lionel, Scared Crow, Dotty and, of course, her little dog Mooch through a saga of Western adventure and personal discovery. First they tangled with Mad Dog's gang of bad, barkin', back-bitin' hounds who worked for the meanest old witch in the West, Hawknope Halley. Then they encountered the brainless Buzzards and the terrifying Tarantulas. The singin' Coyotes helped move things along while Ma and Pa Munch and the rest of the Munch Kin point out the way to Dr. Ozzy, the Wizard of Frontier Medicine.

The production was brought to life by Nicki and Brad Poer, members of the Missoula Children's Theatre. The theatre group in GTMO was sponsored by the PTO and MWR with support from HSO and a grant from Newman's Own, Fisher House Foundation and Military Times Media Group.

Thank you to all those who participated in making this production an outstanding success.

Some of the main characters took center stage at the Windjammer last Monday and Tuesday in this western-style Wizard of Oz production. Costumes and set designed were all provided by the Missoula Children's Theatre.

Seniors Taking a Trip Organization Holds Fundraisers

Hoping to help fund a class trip during Spring Break, members of the Seniors Taking a Trip Organization, or STATO, have kicked off their fundraising season.

The STATO would like to thank the community members for their outstanding support in making last weeks car wash and bake sale a success.

Upcoming events may include another car wash and bake sale, a dinner auction, community dinner, Carts to Cars, Margaritaville Night, Dunking Booth, Basketball 2 on 2 and babysitting. Watch the Gazette for dates and details.

If you would like to make a monetary contribution to STATO or would like more information on the organization, please call STATO president Monica Stevens at 4172 (W) or 7744 (H).

FFSC: Your #1 Stop For Financial Information and Advice

“There is a common misperception among many who think the only reason you come to Fleet and Family Support is because you are in trouble,” said Paul Walker, the Program Coordinator for FFSC’s Personal Financial Management Program. “That’s not really true. More than 40 percent of the people I see come by because they have questions of concerns and need information.”

And if there is one thing that the FFSC does best it is provide information to service members and their families on topics ranging from parenting to finances. In fact, Personnel Financial Management (PFM) is one of the core programs at the Navy’s Fleet and Family Support Centers.

PFM is a comprehensive counseling, information, and education program. The goal is to empower service members and their families to develop skills to better manage their financial resources. The counseling, information, and education services are delivered by a trained Command Financial Specialists (CFSs) or the PFM coordinator.

Financial problems can be caused by poor budgeting practices, the lack of basic money management skills, and access to easy credit. Combine those causes with the deployments, frequent moves, and pay fluctuations that are the reality of Navy life, and the result is a growing problem.

The goal of the PFM program is to help by providing knowledge and information before those problems get out of hand. With classes such as Developing a Spending Plan, members are taught to see where their money is actually going and learn ways to get back on track and start saving. “A lot of times, people are just trying to keep track of their finances in their head,” explained Walker, “once you use the computer program and see all the numbers, it is easier to keep track, and you can change the information with every paycheck.”

For those without budgeting concerns, Walker went on to say that FFSC provides many other invaluable financial services such as a First Time Home Buyers Class, Savings and Investments and Car Buying Strategies. Walker also provides financial information to service members considering the Career Status Bouns/REDUX, the Thrift Savings Plan and to those getting ready to retire or leave the service.

In essence, PFM is a program which is almost totally client-driven. Its programs are developed based on the needs of the service members and families, as well as, the installation, commands

You do not have to wait until a class is being offered to seek advice or information from Walker. Just give him a call at the FFSC at 4141. He is more than happy to talk to people one-on-one and provide any information he can. If he does not have the information you need, he will help you find it by referring you to various websites or by calling on others in the PFM community. It is almost guaranteed you will always walk out of the FFSC better informed.

The next class being offered in the PFM Program is First Time Home Buying on January 30 from 5 to 7pm. Topics covered include: buying versus renting, mortgages, interest rates, VA loans, conventional loans, etc. For more information, call 4141.

In March, Walker will be holding a class on Developing a Spending Plan. Even if you think you are on track financially, getting a chance to use the computer worksheets and seeing how you can save and plan for projected goals is definitely a reason to attend.

A mobile training team will be on island April 21-25 to provide Command Financial Specialist training. To those looking to take on this collateral duty, you must be an E6 or above, financially stable and highly motivated, have at least one year left at your current command and be designated in writing by the CO. Training will cover such topics as pay and allowances, credit management, tax issues, and financial counseling. For more information call 4141.

Cone Shells and Poisonous Shells

By Paul Schoenfeld
Natural Resources Manager

At a recent Safety Stand-down, the subject of poisonous shells at GTMO came up. The Navy Diver's display informed personnel of dangerous marine life, including Cone shells, and rightfully so. The Academy of Natural Sciences describes 5 species of the genus Conus from the Guantanamo region and several more from other parts of Cuba and the West Indies which may also occur here. None of the 5 described for this area have common names however, their scientific names are Conus daucus, C. erminius, C. granulatus, C. mus, and C. regius. All but C. granulatus can be found on an excellent website (<http://www.coneshell.net/>) which has full color photographs of cone shells found throughout the world. Likewise, the Academy of Natural Sciences has a data base of cones and many other shells found throughout the world. This data base can be accessed at <http://data.acnatsci.org/wasp/index.php> and will be useful for many of our personnel, those transferring to other parts of the world or others just looking for distribution information on poisonous shells, or other seashells.

Another subject discussed about these shells is whether or not they are lethal. In general, Cone shells found in the Atlantic and Caribbean are not as toxic as those found in the Pacific, some of which are lethal. However, whether our Cone shells are lethal or not depends largely on the persons reaction to the toxin after being stung. In the same sense that different people react differently to bee stings, there will be different reactions to being stung by Cone shells. So it is best not to touch Cone shells and, when in doubt, treat them as if they are lethal. At the very least, they can inflict a nasty sting so again, its best not to touch them.

Cones are small shells with different species ranging from less than 1/2 inch up to 7 inches long. The larger cones are located in tropical Pacific waters. Cones are predators and sting their prey with a hollow barb. Different species have different prey items including worms, other molluscs, and fish. When the prey is located the cone impales the victim with the hollow barb and injects the venom, called a conotoxin. The barb is attached to the cone by a fine thread-like tissue allowing the cone to retrieve its prey. Cone shells are normally active at night and bury themselves in the sand or take refuge under rocks during the day.

While it is generally believed that Cone shells of the Caribbean and Atlantic are not nearly as toxic as those in the Pacific, certain precautions can be taken to insure you don't get stung while searching for seashells. It is best not to use bare hands when looking under stones or scraping the sand. There are other things out there that can hurt you including fire coral, sea urchins, jellyfish, and others. Some authorities believe Cone shells can sting through a wet suit or gloves, so if you insist on collecting Cones, it is smart to handle them with tongs.

Whatever you are collecting, it is often difficult to positively identify the shell as harmless when the shell is covered with marine growth, so use good common sense including knowing when its best to just leave the shell alone. Collecting live Cone shells is regulated under COMNAVBASEGTMOINST 1710.10H and they count towards the limit of 2 live shells per person per day. Report violations by calling 4105 or VHS Channel 12. Turn in poachers, they're stealing from you!
